It Takes A Village.

Our founder, Monsignor John Patrick Carroll-Abbing knew this much to be true when he established Il Villaggio at La Repubblica dei Ragazzi (Boys' & Girls' Republic of Italy) to support orphaned children in Italy 76 years ago. He built a community of international supporters who believed that every child, regardless of race, religion, ethnicity, nationality, gender identity, sexual orientation or disability status, should be entitled to a safe and successful future.

Since then, our organization has established villages of children around the world who learn invaluable life skills and develop a sense of responsibility for themselves and their peers, with the support of adult educators, health professionals, psychologists and mentors. In Italy, Ethiopia, India, Colombia, Bolivia, Peru, Guatemala, Mexico and Uganda we have changed the lives of more than 40,000 children and their communities. None of this would have been possible without the help of thousands of donors and supporters like you.

For the first time, A Chance In Life is bringing this vision of positive youth development to the United States. Many children in New York City experience gang activity, lack of access to education, substance use and domestic violence. We believe we can give vulnerable young people here in our own community a safe and successful future through our new program - The Village. But we can't do it alone.

It takes a village. Join us.
